

Patricia King - Photographer

---

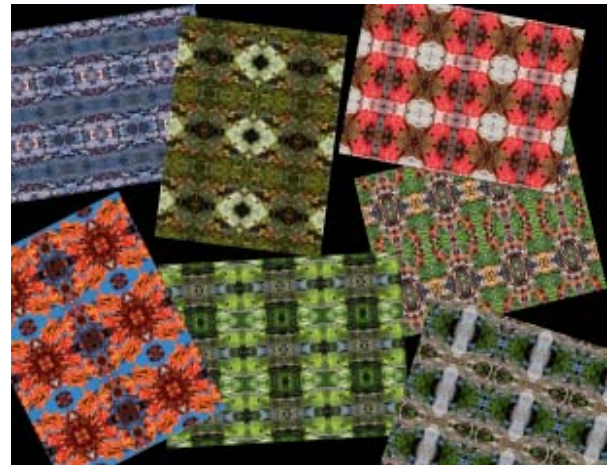

---

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Patricia King was born in 1955 at Fort Belvoir, Virginia. Her family moved to western Loudoun County in 1963. She received her undergraduate degree at Frostburg State University in western Maryland and her graduate degree at Marymount University in Arlington, Virginia. She has been pursuing photography since 2001.

She has exhibited her work at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts and won the People's Choice Award at the 76th Annual Cumberland Valley Photographic Salon in 2009 for her photograph "Icy Pond". She received second place in the Friends of the Blue Ridge Mountains 2009 Photographic Exhibit for her photograph "Morning Ribbons". She has exhibited and sold her work in various local venues. She has developed and conducted introductory photography workshops for pre-adolescent school children. Patricia King currently lives in Strasburg, Virginia and works in western Loudoun.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

There is nothing better for me than a cool crisp morning walking through the myriad of state and national parks or along a local nature trail. The quiet beauty of early morning inspires me to capture the finery given to us by nature. I love looking at the intimate details that make-up the total picture. The challenge that motivates me on every trip is collecting the play of light and patterns of color that surround us through my camera so I can enjoy them whenever and where ever I happen to be.